

Affiliations, Memberships and Registrations

ANSI - IAR's membership in ANSI gives it access rights to information and business intelligence as well as a voice and influence over the standardization and conformity assessment decisions that directly affect our clients. ANSI's participation within conformity assessment organizations such as IAF, ILAC, IAAC, ISO and others, help ensure that the interest of its members, such as IAR, are well represented internationally.

US Federal Government Business Partner Network – IAR has been successfully registered as part of the US Federal Government's Business Partner Network which is an indication that it has fulfilled applicable requirements and is subject to monitoring by the US Federal Government.

Dun & Bradstreet Numbers (DUNS) – D&B, or Dun & Bradstreet, is a long-established name in business information services, founded in 1841 as the Mercantile Agency. Information provided by D&B is vital to the operations of many businesses in many industries. IAR's registration in Dun & Bradstreet verifies its existence as a viable, global business entity.

NELAC - The NELAC Institute is a national accreditation program, whereby all entities involved in the generation of environmental measurement data within the United States are accredited to one uniform, rigorous, and robust program that has been implemented consistently nationwide and focuses on the technical competence of the entity pursuing accreditation. IAR's membership in and support of NELAC demonstrates a commitment to environmental protection by benchmarking the best practices in accreditation.

ISO/IWA 2 Working Group – IAR was formally recognized P-Member of the working group responsible for developing ISO/IWA 2 - which is a guide for applying ISO 9001 to Educational and Training Institutions. This is strategically important for IAR, as the elements covered by standard IWA2 serve as the basis of the requirements that IAR uses for the accreditation of organizations that provide Educational and Training services.
